How to Use This Manual

This companion collects 2,000 visual effects prompts for film, television, advertising and animation. Every prompt is ready to paste into a text-to-video or image-to-video model, and every card names its camera technique. The first eight chapters teach you, step by step, how to write VFX prompts from scratch and how to layer them onto prompts from any other manual.

- Part One — Simulation FX (400): fire, smoke, explosions, splashes, oceans, weather particles, ice, sand and debris, destruction, cloth, hair and fur, lava, electricity, plasma, particle swarms and viscous fluids.
- Part Two — Fantasy & Magic FX (400): spellcasting, runes and magic circles, holy and shadow magic, nature magic, elemental combinations, summoning, teleportation, enchanted objects, potions, curses, healing, time magic, illusions, transformations and starlight magic.
- Part Three — Sci-Fi & Tech FX (400): holograms, HUD overlays, force fields, beams, matter transport, warp, cloaking, nanotech, robots and mechs, glitch and data, spacecraft, alien biotech, portals, gravity, disintegration and scanning.
- Part Four — Cinematic & Compositing FX (400): set extension, digital crowds, digital doubles and de-aging, creature integration, virtual production, sky replacement, miniatures, time-slice, 2.5D parallax, transitions, lens and light FX, grading, clones, invisible cleanup and practical effects.
- Part Five — Stylized, Animation, Ad & Broadcast FX (400): anime, cartoon, painterly, stop-motion, motion graphics, product, food, beauty, automotive, music video, social transitions, sports broadcast, science visualization, retro, surreal and kinetic abstract effects.

Every bundle includes a “Layer it onto any prompt” box showing a plain base prompt and the same prompt with that bundle’s effect layered in. Use these boxes as models when you add effects to prompts from the earlier manuals. Chapter 4 explains the method in detail.

Three ways to use the book:

- Paste and go: copy a card as it is.
- Swap the subject: keep the effect and camera, and change the person, object or place to fit your project.
- Layer: take a prompt you already have (a scene, movement or camera prompt) and add one of these effects to it with the five-step layering method.

A note on tone: action and destruction prompts are non-graphic. Impacts are shown as sparks, dust, shockwaves and light rather than injury.

1. What a VFX Prompt Needs

Real VFX artists don’t just ask for “an explosion.” They specify what makes it, how it behaves, how it lights the world and how it is filmed. AI video models respond the same way: the more physical information you give them, the less the effect looks pasted on. A complete VFX prompt has eight parts:

Part	Question it answers	Example
1. Effect type	What is the effect, named precisely?	a fireball, a hologram, a set extension
2. Source	Where does it come from?	from the open palm, from a ruptured pipe
3. Behavior & physics	How does it move, grow or change?	rolling upward, curling into black smoke
4. Interaction	What does it touch, light or push?	lighting her face orange, scattering leaves
5. Scale & timing	How big, how fast, when?	a towering column, in a single second
6. Camera	How is it filmed?	low-angle slow motion, slow orbit
7. Integration style	How real or stylized?	photoreal, anime, painterly, VHS

Part	Question it answers	Example
8. Negatives	What must not appear?	no text, no gore, no flat glow

You don't need all eight in every prompt. A short, strong prompt usually has type, behavior, interaction and camera. The others refine it.

Why interaction matters most

Effects look fake when they don't affect anything. Fire that doesn't light the walls, rain that doesn't splash or a hologram that casts no glow all read as stickers. Always write at least one clause about what the effect does to the world around it.

Weak	Strong
a sword on fire	a sword igniting with rolling orange flame, firelight flickering across the knight's armor and the stone walls
a hologram of a city	a blue holographic city rising from the table, its glow lighting the general's face from below, scan lines flickering
a magic shield	a hexagonal shield flaring blue as arrows strike it, each impact spreading ripples and spitting sparks onto the grass

2. The Step-by-Step VFX Prompt Method

Use this eight-step method to write any effect from scratch. Each step adds one phrase. The worked example builds a single prompt as you go.

Step 1 — Name the effect precisely.

Pick the most specific word you can. "Fire" becomes "a rolling fireball," "a ring of blue gas flame" or "a fire whirl." Precise nouns trigger precise visuals.

a fire whirl

Step 2 — Give it a source.

Say where the effect starts: a body part, an object, a crack in the ground, the sky. A source anchors the effect in space.

a fire whirl rising from a burning wheat field

Step 3 — Describe behavior and physics.

Use verbs of motion and material: rolling, curling, spiraling, shattering, dripping, crackling. Add how it changes over time.

a fire whirl rising from a burning wheat field, spinning faster and stretching into a tall twisting column

Step 4 — Add interaction with the world.

What does it light, push, melt, reflect or scatter? Mention light first, then physical reaction.

..., its orange glow lighting the smoke from inside and sucking embers and straw into the vortex

Step 5 — Set scale and timing.

Use comparisons ("taller than the barn") and time ("in seconds," "slowly," "at the peak of the shot").

..., growing taller than the barn behind it in a few seconds

Step 6 — Choose the camera.

Put the camera at the front of the prompt. Slow motion for fast physics, wide shots for scale, close-ups for detail, orbits for 3D effects.

Wide low-angle shot at dusk: ...

Step 7 — State the integration style.

End with how the effect should look: photoreal, practical-looking, anime, painterly, retro. Add a light or color note.

..., photoreal VFX integration, physically accurate light.

Step 8 — Add negatives (if supported).

Put what you don't want in the negative field. See Appendix B.

Negative: looping fire, CG-looking smoke, flat glow

The finished prompt

Wide low-angle shot at dusk: a fire whirl rising from a burning wheat field, spinning faster and stretching into a tall twisting column, its orange glow lighting the smoke from inside and sucking embers and straw into the vortex, growing taller than the barn behind it in a few seconds, photoreal VFX integration, physically accurate light.

Tip: read your prompt aloud. If you can picture the effect, its source, what it touches and where the camera is, the model can too.

3. VFX Vocabulary by Family

The right word changes the result. Use these terms in Step 1 and Step 3.

Family	Effect names	Behavior words
Fire	flame, fireball, fire whirl, flashover, backdraft, embers, blue gas flame	licking, rolling, roaring, flickering, guttering, igniting
Smoke & steam	plume, wisp, column, haze, ground fog, steam jet, vapor trail	curling, billowing, drifting, venting, dissipating
Explosions	fireball, shockwave, dust ring, debris burst, concussion wave	erupting, blooming, expanding, rippling, raining down
Liquids	splash crown, sheet, droplets, spray, wake, ripple, pour, ribbon	cascading, crowning, splattering, beading, sloshing
Destruction	shatter, collapse, fracture, crumble, debris field	cracking, splintering, toppling, pulverizing
Energy & magic	aura, glyph, magic circle, beam, orb, sparks, wisps, motes	pulsing, crackling, swirling, radiating, flaring
Sci-fi tech	hologram, HUD, force field, beam, portal, warp tunnel, voxels	flickering, scanning, rippling, materializing, glitching
Compositing	set extension, matte painting, clean plate, crowd sim, sky replacement	extending, revealing, matching, blending
Lens & light	anamorphic flare, bokeh, halation, god rays, caustics	streaking, blooming, dancing, pouring
Stylized	speed lines, impact frame, smear frame, cel shading, film burn	snapping, squashing, stretching, popping

Color words for effects

- Fire: amber, orange, white-hot, blue-white, ember red.
- Magic: violet, gold, emerald, silver, ice-blue, rose.
- Sci-fi: cyan, teal, magenta, amber HUD, neon green.
- Give each effect one main color. Two colors at most per shot keeps it readable.

4. Layering VFX Onto Other Prompts

This is the most useful skill in the book. Any prompt from the earlier manuals (camera shots, scenes, human or animal movement, action, conditions and powers) can take a VFX layer. Use this five-step layering method:

Step	What you do	Example
1. Start with the base	Copy your existing prompt. Keep its camera and subject.	Slow dolly-in: a dancer leaping across a dark stage, moody stage light.
2. Find the insertion point	Put the effect right after the action it reacts to, before the look.	after "leaping across a dark stage"
3. Add a connector	Join with "as," "while," "with" or "and." "As" works best for cause and effect.	as ...
4. Write the effect clause	Use the 8-step method in short form: type + source + behavior.	a sheet of water erupts from the floor beneath her feet
5. Add interaction, adjust the look	Show how the effect touches the subject, then update the look so light matches.	droplets freezing mid-air around her, stage light glittering in the water

Result

Slow dolly-in: a dancer leaping across a dark stage as a sheet of water erupts from the floor beneath her feet, droplets freezing mid-air around her, stage light glittering in the water, moody stage light.

Connector cheat sheet

Connector	Use it when	Example
as	the effect happens at the same moment as, or because of, the action	as his sword ignites
while	the effect runs alongside a longer action	while snow spirals around her with	the effect is a constant attribute	with a glowing aura around his fists
then	the effect follows the action in sequence	then shatters into glowing cubes
until	the effect builds to a moment	until the whole street is frozen

Layering examples from each companion manual

Base prompt (from)	With VFX layer
Camera manual: Low-angle tracking shot of a motorcycle racing along a coastal road at sunset.	Low-angle tracking shot of a motorcycle racing along a coastal road at sunset as blue light trails stream from its wheels and the road surface ripples like water behind it.
Movement manual: A sprinter exploding out of the blocks, slow motion.	A sprinter exploding out of the blocks as a dust shockwave ripples outward from her feet and rainbow echo trails follow each stride, slow motion.
Animal movement: An eagle diving toward a lake.	An eagle diving toward a lake while its wings trail streaks of golden fire, the water flaring orange as it skims the surface.
Action manual: A martial artist spinning into a kick in a rainy alley.	A martial artist spinning into a kick in a rainy alley as time freezes mid-spin, raindrops hanging in the air before scattering in a ring of spray.
Conditions manual: A blizzard sweeping across a mountain village.	A blizzard sweeping across a mountain village as glowing blue runes appear in the snow, the flakes swirling into the shape of a giant wolf.
Scene manual: A cozy café on a rainy afternoon.	A cozy café on a rainy afternoon as the steam from each cup curls into tiny dancing figures, warm light glowing through them.

Layering rules

- Keep the base camera. Change it only if the effect needs it, for example adding slow motion for splashes.
- Match the light. If the effect glows, mention the glow on the subject and remove looks that conflict (a “golden-hour” look fights a blue magic glow at night).
- Match the style. Don’t layer a photoreal fluid onto an anime base. Pick one integration style for the whole prompt.
- Keep the subject first. The base subject should still be the first thing named after the camera.
- One clause per effect. If the effect clause runs longer than the base prompt, trim it.

5. Stacking Multiple Effects

Big VFX shots combine several effects. AI models handle this best when you rank them: one primary effect that drives the shot, one secondary effect that reacts to it, and one tertiary atmospheric effect. Stop at three.

Rank	Role	Example (dragon landing)
Primary	The main event, named first and in the most detail	a dragon landing on a castle wall, stones cracking beneath its claws
Secondary	A direct reaction caused by the primary	a ring of dust and debris blasting outward
Tertiary	Atmosphere that ties it together	embers drifting through the smoky dusk air

Low-angle slow motion: a dragon landing on a castle wall, stones cracking beneath its claws, a ring of dust and debris blasting outward, embers drifting through the smoky dusk air, epic fantasy scale.

Stacking rules

- Make the secondary effect caused by the primary (impact → dust; spell → wind; beam → steam).
- Use different scales: one large, one medium, one fine (fireball, smoke, sparks).
- Use one color family or two complementary colors.
- If the output looks messy, remove the tertiary effect first.

6. Timing: Writing VFX Beats

Effects unfold over time. A clip of five to ten seconds can hold up to three beats. Write them in order using time words.

Beat	Words to use	Example
Build-up	begins to, slowly, a faint, first	a faint glow begins to pulse in the stone
Peak	suddenly, erupts, bursts, at the peak	then the stone bursts into a column of light
Aftermath	settling, drifting, fading, lingering	motes of light drifting down as the glow fades

Slow push-in: a faint glow begins to pulse inside an ancient stone, then the stone bursts into a column of white light, motes of light drifting down as the glow fades, mythic golden glow.

Tip: match the camera to the beat. A push-in builds tension, slow motion stretches the peak and a locked-off frame lets the aftermath breathe.

Speed and frame-rate words

- Slow motion / high-speed (Phantom): splashes, shattering, sparks, hair and cloth.
- Time-lapse: growth, decay, sky changes, crowds and cities.
- Speed ramp: impacts and stunts, normal speed into slow motion and back.
- Freeze / bullet time: one hero moment with the camera moving around it.

- Reverse: reassembly, un-shattering and rewinding magic.

7. Integration Styles

Integration style decides whether the effect looks filmed, drawn or designed. Add one style phrase at the end of the prompt.

Style	Phrase to add	Best for
Photoreal VFX	photoreal VFX integration, physically accurate light	film, TV, realistic ads
Practical look	shot practically on set, real smoke and debris	grounded action and period pieces
Blockbuster	cinematic VFX polish, anamorphic flares, rich contrast	trailers, superhero and sci-fi
Anime	cel-shaded anime style, bold speed lines	anime and stylized action
Cartoon	classic cartoon style, squash and stretch	kids' content and comedy
Painterly	living oil painting, visible brushstrokes	art films and music videos
Stop-motion	handmade stop-motion, clay and felt textures	craft ads and quirky shorts
Retro	VHS tracking lines, film grain, CRT glow	nostalgia and music videos
Commercial	premium commercial polish, clean studio light	product, food, beauty and car ads

Troubleshooting

Problem	Fix
Effect looks pasted on	Add an interaction clause: light on faces, reflections, wind, debris.
Effect is too small or missing	Move it earlier in the prompt and describe its scale ("filling the frame").
Too many effects, messy image	Rank effects and cut to three; remove the tertiary first.
Physics look floaty	Add weight words: heavy, crashing, splattering; use slow motion deliberately.
Colors are muddy	Give each effect one named color and a dark or contrasting background.
Subject changes or morphs	Keep the subject short and first, and use image-to-video with a reference frame.
Text or logos appear on HUDs and ads	Write "no text, no logos" in the negative prompt.
Style drifts between real and cartoon	Use one integration style phrase and repeat the medium ("cel-shaded").

Appendix C — Sources & Further Reading

The prompts are original. The structure, terminology and best practices were informed by:

- 30 Cinematic AI Video Prompts — The Director's Swipe File, its 2nd edition and the movement, action and conditions companion manuals (format, bundle structure and layering targets).
- FXI Studio, "AI Video Camera Movements" dataset and Rapidata "Camera Movement Benchmark" dataset, Hugging Face (CC BY 4.0) — camera-move taxonomy.
- Standard visual-effects pipeline terminology: simulation (FLIP fluids, pyro, rigid bodies), compositing, matte painting, rotoscoping, camera projection, set extension and virtual production (LED volumes).
- Industry practice in commercials and broadcast: product hero shots, high-speed liquid photography, beauty retouching, sports replay and tracking graphics.
- Animation and stylization vocabulary: smear frames, squash and stretch, impact frames, cel shading, stop-motion and pixilation.
